Higher education associations and national agencies are promoting President Obama's goal to increase the number of students who complete degrees, certificates, and other credentials by 2020. These associations and funding agencies are supporting institutions that promote degree completion. These efforts are not restricted to the United States but are part of the international higher educational picture as well.

In this Web Event, led by NACADA Associate Director Jennifer Joslin, our panelists will provide an overview of the major issues that are a part of the Completion Agenda. Join us for a compelling hour-long discussion about this critical trend in higher education.

Connectivity and digital access is an increasing need for our students and a vital requirement to excel beyond the higher education learning environment. Universal design and inclusion through online academic advising can serve as a method to continue support and connectivity with students. How can administrators consider, review and implement appropriate online accommodations for our online learners? As you have witnessed the growth and shift towards Distance Education, the services that you have provided at traditionally brick-and-mortar locales should be mirrored in an online environment.
