

2013 Call for Applications Rodgers Graduate Assistantship

We are seeking applications for the Rodgers Graduate Research Assistantship.

Eligibility:

- Full-time graduate student at the UA College of Agriculture and Life Sciences studying and /or working in the area of developing food sources on marginal lands. This can be food directly for human consumption or fodder for livestock.
- The student should exhibit a great desire to complete a degree as demonstrated by their past performance and goal to have a career in this field.
- Candidate must have an established relationship with a funded CALS research professor or advisor, with the mutual understanding the student will work as a graduate research assistant.
- Applicant should be in good academic standing, but GPA is not a primary consideration for an award.
- Preference will be given for a first-year graduate student who worked during their years as an undergraduate.

Value Description:

Graduate research assistantship, 10 hours/week, $7,700 salary (total for fall and spring semesters) plus valuable benefits (see <http://grad.arizona.edu>). Award recipient is eligible for the second year of funding if he/she continues to demonstrate satisfactory progress as defined by the eligibility criteria. Funding is available for no more than two years per Rodgers Scholar.

Process:

- Applicants will submit a one-page PDF description of their short- and long-term goals (in the resume section of the application) in addition to the normal CALS scholarship application administered by the CALS Career and Academic Programs Office.

Applications must be submitted online before 4:00pm APRIL 1, 2013.