

Altar Valley Conservation Alliance Restoration Project Design Workshop

at the Palo Alto Ranch

Supported by the Pima Natural Resource Conservation District

Wednesday, October 9, 2024 | 9AM-2PM

Interested in helping to design a restoration project?

At this workshop, we will discuss the process of assessing and designing a project to enhance site stability, wildlife habitat, and livestock forage at a complex site where an ephemeral stream tributary flows into a large wash. We will share the initial project design and discuss creative ideas to refine the design, monitor and expand the project, and help the site reach its potential.

This event will be led by local restoration experts Omar Ore-Giron of Confluence Construction & Consulting and Jeff Rhody of Dryland Design. The workshop is for:

- Landowners who have similar issues or projects on their property
- Practitioners who can provide insights and connect on their methods
- Researchers who may be interested in studying this project
- Students and early career professionals who want to learn about project design

Register here for this free workshop!

For more information about the workshop, please contact Julia Guglielmo at julia@altarvalleyconservation.org.